

Dr. Steven Wolf and Patricia McGoldrick, N.P. to Discuss Concussion on WABC-TV Special, “Protect Our Children: Healthy & Fit” and Can be Seen Now on a WABC Chat

On Saturday, May 21, WABC-TV will air a special entitled, “Protect Our Children: Healthy & Fit” at 7 PM, EDT and re-run on Sunday, May 22 at 5:30am. Hosted by Eyewitness News Anchor Diana Williams, the program reports on what we can do to keep our children healthy and fit.

With sports now more aggressive and competitive, even professional athletes are admitting to the terrible after-effects they’ve endured from concussions. Neurologist, Dr. Steven Wolf, Director of the Pediatric Epilepsy Program at Beth Israel Medical Center and his colleague, Patricia McGoldrick, N.P., will discuss the serious issue of concussions in the athletic arena and what the testing and the treatment entail. Dr. Wolf is also Director of Pediatric Neurology at St. Luke’s- Roosevelt Hospitals.

In advance of the special, Dr. Wolf and Ms. McGoldrick provide advice on concussions for a web chat that can be seen on the WABC website. To view, click this link:

http://abclocal.go.com/wabc/story?section=resources/lifestyle_community/seasonal&id=8136093

All of the segments along with additional material, links to resources and agencies that can be of help will be posted on www.7online.com/protect after the airing of the program.